Dear SCJA Members and Conference Participants,

Welcome to Nashville! I'm excited for our conference's return to "Music City". The atmosphere, history, and great music scene make this my favorite city to visit. I know you will enjoy the location.

Our conference and journal will be building on 2018's conference theme with our focus being on "Improving the Efficiency and Quality of Criminal Justice Research and Education." Last year, in his Presidential Address, Marv Krohn aptly asked us to consider whether we, as individuals and a field, have made the positive impact on the criminal justice system that we desire. He, along with colleagues on thematic panels, largely concluded that criminology and criminal justice research had made a difference; however, those presentations conceded that difference was limited and was infrequently the central motivation for our ongoing work. Marv's thoughtful critique of the field left me focused on how we can do better. I have identified structural, political, and organizational roadblocks that we may need to circumnavigate in order to be more efficient, more effective, and more motivated as criminologists. I hope you'll join me for my address "Academia Shrugs" on Wednesday.

We've also worked to give the conference a Nashville feel. You'll notice our panel titles are all derived from country music lyrics. Hopefully they'll expose you to some great tunes you've yet to hear and demonstrate how music often serves as a mirror for the social issues we investigate. I'd like to thank Wesley Jennings, our Program Chair, for humoring me on this and for all the great work he did to create our program. We'll also have live entertainment at our Tuesday and Wednesday receptions, and our Thursday evening event will be hosted by the George Jones Museum on 2nd Avenue. In lieu of a traditional keynote speaker at the luncheon, I've asked a group that utilizes music therapy in their work with incarcerated individuals to speak and share with us. Their "Redemption Songs" program is a unique take on restorative justice whereby offenders attempt to make amends, seek forgiveness, and reconnect with the community through original song rather than words and letters.

As for the health of SCJA overall, I have nothing but good news. We had a record number of presenters in 2018 and surpassed that number this year. In fact, over a three-year period our number of conference presentations and posters has increased by 25%. Our membership is up, student participation is up, and we even have more Presidential level sponsors than before. We thank the University of Central Florida, Florida State University, Old Dominion, and Springer for their support. Our growth is remarkable and goes back to one thing: our membership. I repeatedly hear that our conference is seen as the most welcoming to new members and we receive accolades for the way you mentor student members from your own and other universities.

During my presidency, there have been a few changes that I should summarize for the membership. First, we established a committee (first temporarily and then permanently) to oversee our publications and records. Julie Baldwin oversaw this committee which introduced our lighthearted "Crime and Grits" newsletter and organized many of our electronic records. Second, we have developed an organizational diversity statement to frame our future membership efforts and challenged the membership committee to reach out to universities that rarely attend our events. Additionally, we created a Policy Audit Committee of non-board members to evaluate our policies, procedures, and operational guidelines. Courtney Crittenden did an excellent job of leading this group and advising us on how we need to revise procedures to be more detailed, consistent, and effective. As some of the committee's suggestions require alterations to by-law wording, you will likely see these on next year's ballot. We also revised our sponsorship packages in a true win-win fashion. Our packages now provide each university with more exposure at a lower cost, but the increase in the number of sponsors (due to the lower rate) resulted in a net revenue gain. Our attempts to set up more convenient upload systems for program ads and other sponsor materials have been unsuccessful, but we will continue our work there. We have also worked to increase membership through events at ASC and flash sales; both seemed to be successful. Perhaps our greatest growth has been related our American Journal of Criminal Justice. In just the first year after receiving a Social Science Index impact factor, AJCJ has jumped into the top 20 in the field. We appreciate all of Mitch Miller's work as editor and funded an initiative to promote the AJCJ at other conferences in order to continue this rise in prestige.

I truly appreciate you selecting me as your president. It was a special honor and the highlight of my career. I know the association will continue to be in good hands with Cathy Marcum and Jim Hawdon joining the board; they are both great people and impressive academics. I anticipate Wesley Jennings will take our association to new heights as President. Thank you again for this opportunity, and I hope you enjoy Nashville!

Sincerely,

John Stogner
President, Southern Criminal Justice Association

The President's Guide to Nashville

John Stogner

Nashville is one of my favorite cities. It's got a thriving music scene, excellent food, and great sports venues. Here's some advice on what to do when you're in town.

- Visit the Ryman Auditorium. The "Mother Church of Country Music" is just three blocks from the conference hotel. It has hosted events since 1892, it's where bluegrass music started, and was home of the Grand Ole Opry for thirty years. You can tour it during the day, but I'd recommend catching Dwight Yoakam Monday night or the Opry Country Classics show on Thursday night.
- Stop in at Robert's Western World. The home of an old guitar company became one of the places you can always find traditional country music. Each time I've been there, you hear music that reminds you of Marty Robbins. It's got great prices and an interesting menu (fried bologna sandwiches and moon pies are their specialty).
- See the Grand Ole Opry live! Check out the live radio show that started as "The WSM Barn Dance" 94 years ago. The Opry is a great show even for people that aren't fans of country music. It mixes humor and a variety of acts throughout the two-hour show. You'll need to Uber or shuttle from the conference hotel, but it's worth it—you never know if a surprise star will take the stage. The Opry has shows at 7pm on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday.
- Wander down Broadway and hear live music. The best part of Nashville is that you can walk down the street any time of day and find all sorts of great music. Rarely do you find a cover charge, so just explore and follow your ears. Maybe you'll hear an artist about to make it big.
- Visit the Country Music Hall of Fame. If you head about a half-mile down 4th Avenue you'll find the Country Music Hall of Fame. They have rotating exhibits, so there's something new to see even if you've been there before. Right now, they have special exhibits focusing on Keith Whitley, Brooks and Dunn, and the Outlaw music of the 1970's. Marty Stuart performs there on Wednesday!
- See the Titans play in LP Field. If you stay a couple days after the conference, the Colts are in town.
- Step in Tootsie's Orchid Lounge. It's known as the world's #1 honky tonk, so it can get crowded. Go earlier to see the stage that hosted many of the Opry greats before and after their shows at the Ryman.

Most importantly, enjoy the SCJA conference. There are some great panels on the program, and we hope you'll get to know other association members at our receptions!

Please stop by the book exhibit in Cumberland South Foyer and check out the many great books and resources.

Southern Criminal Justice Association Annual Charity Spotlight: “Redemption Songs” (The Beat of Life)

“Redemption Songs” is designed to serve the inmate populations in jails, prisons, and juvenile detention facilities, as well as children of the inmates through music programs specifically designed for youth with an incarcerated parent. This program’s primary structure is set up as a one or two day songwriting event inside the correctional facility, with inmates each being paired with two of Nashville’s pro/hit songwriters. The goal is for the inmates to collaborate with their songwriter teams to share and begin to process their stories differently through the creation of their own song. Through this process, inmates are also given an opportunity to create something of great value... both a song of their own and new supportive, healthy friendships with their songwriter teams. Guitars for the inmates are left in the facility in a safe place, that they may continue their new musical journey if they wish, especially with additional program pieces. The songwriting event is followed by a professional studio album of the songs created with the inmates (either onsite in the correctional facility or in an outside studio), as well as a concert featuring the inmate-songwriter matches and other artists who strongly support the cause of prison reform and inmate rehabilitation. Copies of the compilation album are sent to spouses, children, and other family members or significant others that are affected most by the inmates’ incarceration, to create additional bridges and opportunities for healing with loved ones.

2019 Award Recipients

Outstanding Student Awards

Award Description: The Southern Criminal Justice Association recognizes exemplary student achievement through four awards. Eligibility for each award is limited to students currently enrolled (or graduates who were enrolled through May 1, 2019) in schools within the Southern region. Each nomination must contain a description of the nominee's accomplishments (in areas such as scholarship, leadership, public service, etc.). The nomination should include the nominee's grade point average and additional information sufficient to answer the following question: "In what ways has this student contributed to his/her academic program, college and/or community?"

The Tom Barker Outstanding Undergraduate Student Award

Victoria Rapp, Loyola University New Orleans

Awardee Bio: Victoria Rapp is a recent undergraduate and current graduate student in the Department of Criminology and Justice at Loyola University New Orleans. She has worked extensively on the evaluation of an intensive probation and reentry program in Jefferson Parish, Louisiana, resulting in several professional reports and research projects.

Selection Committee: Andrew Denney, Loyola University New Orleans; Justin Smith, University of North Carolina at Wilmington; and Sara Evans, West Florida University

The Outstanding Masters Student Award

Joshua Ruffin, Virginia State University

Awardee Bio: Joshua R. Ruffin, M.S., is an incoming Criminology and Criminal Justice Ph.D. student and graduate assistant in the Department of Sociology and Criminal Justice at Old Dominion University. His research examines police interactions with vulnerable populations, incarcerated populations with special needs, and Juvenile Crime Prevention.

Selection Committee: Tasha Youstin, Western Carolina University (Chair); Jose Torres, Louisiana State University; and John Brent, University of Eastern Kentucky

The Outstanding Doctoral Student Award

Rachel Severson, University of South Florida

Awardee Bio: Rachel Severson expects to earn her Ph.D. in Criminology from the University of South Florida (USF) in 2020 and already has a sole authored manuscript under review, a published peer-reviewed article, two book chapters, and four technical reports. Her research interests include mental health issues in corrections, the dynamics between mentally ill individuals and social control theories and policies, mental illness/substance abuse and crime, and the moderating effects of gender in these contexts.

Selection Committee: Shaun Thomas, University of Arkansas (Chair); Scott Maggard, Old Dominion University; and Lisa Dario, Florida Atlantic University

The AJCJ Outstanding Article Award

Rhys Hester, Clemson University

“Prior Record and Recidivism Risk”

American Journal of Criminal Justice, June 2019, Volume 44, Issue 3, pp 353–375

Abstract: An individual’s prior record can have a pronounced impact on the punishment he or she receives for a new offense, substantially increasing the likelihood and duration of an incarceration sentence. Not only does prior record contribute to mass incarceration, but prior research has consistently shown that criminal history mediates race effects and exacerbates disparities. In guidelines jurisdictions, criminal history enhancements are partially or primarily employed as proxies for risk prevention. But for the most part these scores were not developed empirically, and, to date, whether scores are valid predictors of risk has gone unexplored. This paper uses survival analysis and area under the curve analysis to examine the predictive efficacy of the Pennsylvania Prior Record Score using a sample of offenders sentenced in Pennsylvania and followed-up for 3 years after release ($n = 130,758$). The results show that some of the Pennsylvania PRS categories fail to accurately distinguish among offenders based on their likelihood of recidivism. Further, some of the key score components that increase the PRS (and the punishment imposed) have marginal effects on the predictive efficacy of the score, often only increasing the prediction accuracy by a single percentage point. By re-engineering the PRS categories and sub-components, this jurisdiction could recommend less punishment in some cases without any apparent increase in risk to public safety.

Author Bio: Rhys Hester is an assistant professor at Clemson University where he teaches Criminal Law, Courts, and Justice Administration. He holds a PhD in Criminology and Criminal Justice and a JD from the University of South Carolina. Hester’s research has been published in Criminology, Journal of Quantitative Criminology, Crime and Justice: A Review of Research, and American Journal of Criminal Justice, and in chapters published in several volumes by Oxford University Press.

The Outstanding Professional Award

Award Description: This award recognizes a practitioner in the field of criminal justice for outstanding contributions. Nominees must currently serve in a criminal justice-related position within the Southern region. Nominations should include a nominating letter detailing the nominee’s record of achievement and the nominee’s resume. The winner will receive an honorarium to attend the conference.

Assistant Chief William Sorrells, Gallatin Police Department

Awardee Bio: Bill Sorrells currently serves as the Assistant Chief of Police for the Gallatin Police Department in Gallatin, Tennessee. Chief Sorrells has served as a police officer for 36 years, starting his career in 1983 and has worked in all areas of law enforcement. Chief Sorrells obtained a Bachelor of Arts in Management and Human Relations, and holds a Master’s of Science degree in Criminal Justice Administration. Chief Sorrells holds a Doctorate Degree of Jurisprudence from the Nashville School of Law and is licensed to practice law in the State of Tennessee. Chief Sorrells has been issued the title of General Departmental Instructor from the Tennessee Police Officer and Standards Commission (P.O.S.T.), and is certified as an instructor by the P.O.S.T. commission in numerous categories. Chief Sorrells served as a personal security agent for Johnny Cash and June Carter Cash for 18 years. Chief Sorrells has been married to his wife Sheila for 27 years and has a daughter Logan, and a son Ryan.

Selection Committee: John Boman, Bowling Green State University (Chair); Kristina Lopez, University of North Florida; and Jonathan Grubb, Georgia Southern University

The Outstanding Educator Award

Award Description: This award recognizes one criminal justice educator for outstanding academic achievement in teaching, research, and service. The recipient of the award is selected on the basis of overall contributions to higher education in criminal justice. Nominees must be members in good standing of SCJA. Nominations should include the nominee's Curriculum Vita and supportive letters. The winner will receive a lifetime membership to the association.

Brandon Applegate, University of South Carolina

Awardee Bio: A native of Ohio, Brandon Applegate received his bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Bowling Green State University in 1990. After a very short stint as an investigator for a private firm, he entered the graduate program at the University of Cincinnati where he earned his master's degree (1992) and Ph.D. (1997). He is currently a professor at the University of South Carolina and has served as Chair of the Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice since 2011. Prior to joining the faculty at USC, he taught for 14 years at the University of Central Florida. Dr. Applegate has served as President of both the Southern Criminal Justice Association (2006-2007) and the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences (2015-2016). Dr. Applegate's research, teaching, and service to the discipline have earned him an international reputation for contributing to correctional issues, including jail operations and management, public opinion about correctional policies, and how offenders and correctional workers understand their situation, environment, and relationship to each other. His other main area of scholarship investigates how the border between the juvenile system and the adult system is constructed in social and practical terms. Beyond his research, Dr. Applegate counts student development as his most rewarding contribution to criminal justice. He is committed to advancing the quality of justice and effectiveness of policies and practices by developing his students into thoughtful professionals and impactful scholars. Having mentored numerous undergraduates and more than 30 master's and doctoral students so far in his career, he is excited about the future of the field and discipline.

In order to honor our host city's musical heritage, we decided to spice up this year's program by labeling each panel and roundtable with a lyric from a great country song. Rather than just pulling from the hits, we used this opportunity to highlight country music's influence on social justice and reform in the corrections system. Whether it's Johnny Cash highlighting the plight of prisoners in overcrowded facilities or Steve Earle subtly underscoring how gun ownership facilitates violence escalation, their messages have informed and educated the public about critical societal issues over the last fifty years. Further, many of the genre's great artists actively campaigned for social and justice reform including Cash who testified before the Senate about prison conditions and Loretta Lynn who championed women's economic, educational, and sexual liberation. Country music has used clever storytelling that resonates with us and inspires action.

Returning to the point, I've given most panels a label that's a lyric from a poignant country song without identifying the source. We expect you'll find it entertaining to identify the sources; perhaps you'll also take the time to listen to a new song or two. You'll find some titles come from the greats of the past as far back as Hank and Roy Acuff but also discover the evocative lyrics of Kane Brown addressing today's gun violence and Eric Church's recent impassioned plea against hate speech. That being said, forgive me that a few are only tangentially connected to the panel topics or just one paper and for some simply being lighthearted songs—it's tough to find meaningful country songs that relate to research methodology or online activity! We hope you have fun with this!

SCJA welcomes the live entertainment of H.L. Ruth at our Tuesday and Wednesday evening receptions. H.L. performs as the lead singer and guitar player for The Kodiak Brotherhood, banjo player for The New Familiars, and as a solo artist. He has opened for the Gregg Allman Band and The Avett Brothers as well as performing at MerleFest, South by Southwest, and the Bristol Rhythm & Roots Reunion. Creative Loafing has described his performances as "showing an equal respect for front-porch playing, die-folk songwriting, and old-time music that is lovely in execution."

Join us to thank Springer for their support of the organization and our journal. Food, drinks, and great conversation are available!

(In the event of rain, the reception will be held in Nashville Ballroom)

The American Journal of Criminal Justice, the official journal of the Southern Criminal Justice Association, is a peer reviewed publication; manuscripts go through a blind review process. The focus of the Journal is on a wide array of criminal justice topics and issues. Some of these concerns include items pertaining to the criminal justice process, the formal and informal interplay between system components, problems and solutions experienced by various segments, innovative practices, policy development and implementation, evaluative research, the players engaged in these enterprises, and a wide assortment of other related interests. The American Journal of Criminal Justice publishes original articles that utilize a broad range of methodologies and perspectives when examining crime, law, and criminal justice processing.

We're headed to Biloxi, Mississippi in 2020. Join us at the Beau Rivage Resort and Casino for a great conference! In addition to the stellar panels and fellowship that have made Southern conference the top regional criminology conference, we've planned a special emphasis on how we expand the reach of our scholarship and teaching in meaningful ways to recognize and value the importance of interdisciplinary outreach and implications. Thematic presentations, discussions, and roundtables will largely focus on this theme. The Beau Rivage Resort and Casino is a waterfront resort owned and operated by MGM Resorts International and is the largest hotel casino outside of Las Vegas. You will have access to white Gulf Coast beaches during the day and a wide variety of entertainment venues within the hotel when the sun goes down. The hotel is within walking distance of the Biloxi Lighthouse, the downtown Biloxi area, as well as several cultural points of interest. The deadline for proposals is July 15, 2020. Please email questions to Dr. Bryan Miller (blm2@clemson.edu).

DEPARTMENT OF LEGAL STUDIES

OVERVIEW

Offering programs in criminal justice and law studies, the Department of Legal Studies provides students with a critical understanding of the total system of justice and the society in which it functions. At the same time, as part of the School of Applied Sciences, the faculty members are committed to preparing students to move successfully into legal studies careers or graduate work as educated and intellectually mature men and women. An extensive internship program enables students to link classroom learning with practical experience in such key areas as corrections, court and law, law enforcement, private security, probation and parole, research and victim advocacy.

Students get In-field, Internship Experience before graduation.

Highly published faculty integrate latest research in course offerings and panel discussions.

Nationally recognized for student research and service

CRIMINAL JUSTICE

MASTER OF ARTS – CRIMINAL JUSTICE

The master's degree in Criminal Justice is designed to provide a foundation in research and theory in substantive areas of criminal justice activity and focused scholarship on issues of importance to the field.

Our faculty is very productive in terms of teaching, publishing, and service to the community. This translates into graduate courses that are cutting-edge and relevant, as well as opportunities for both faculty-student research collaborations and student engagement in community discipline-related service. A recent internal review determined that our program has a 100% placement rate for students applying to Ph.D. programs.

The Criminal Justice program at Boise State University was named one of the top 10 M.A.-granting universities in terms of total grant dollars obtained by our faculty (Mustaine & Tewksbury, 2009).

Alpha-Stim®

Faster Than Drugs and Without Their Side Effects

Prescription drugs can come with a long list of nasty side effects. Alpha-Stim provides an option that is fast and safe, with no lasting side effects and no risk of addiction. It is proven effective in improving mood and sleep even in the most difficult patients, as evidenced by the recent study of advanced cancer patients at The University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center.

The brain functions electrochemically and can be readily modified by a mild electrical current. Alpha-Stim utilizes cranial electrotherapy stimulation (CES) to deliver the only patented waveform for a medical device of its class, with more than 100 clinical research studies over 38 years. It's easy to use by simply wearing earclips for 20-60 minutes a day while doing normal activities at home or work.

"I recently discovered Alpha-Stim and the results have been nothing short of amazing. Not only have I experience relief from anxiety and insomnia, but, additionally, I have reduced accompanying physical pain."
