

Clemson University: College of Behavioral, Social and Health Sciences: Sociology & Anthropology

Assistant Professor - Location: Brackett 132- Clemson University

The Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Criminal Justice invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor position beginning August 2022. Interested individuals must demonstrate both an active research agenda and a track record of publishing their work in well-respected peer-reviewed outlets. Applicants should also exhibit a clear strategy for funding their research through external grants, with preference given to those with prior success in securing extramural funding. A summary of the College research areas can be found here: <https://www.clemson.edu/cbshs/research/index.html>

The ideal candidate will also demonstrate a willingness and ability to teach across the discipline of Criminal Justice in introductory, methods, and specialized topical courses. Applicants should highlight how they will contribute to our M.S. in Social Science program and an interdisciplinary PhD in Policy Studies program. The Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Criminal Justice has a high standard of instruction and strong expectations for teaching excellence.

Clemson University is a Top 25, Carnegie Research 1 (R-1) public university and was recently awarded an NSF ADVANCE grant to foster gender equity and improve the status of women faculty. With significant ambitions to increase its profile nationally and internationally, Clemson University - and the Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Criminal Justice in particular - prioritizes the preparation of graduates for an increasingly global and diverse society, and in ways that value just outcomes. Towards this end, the department is building a culturally diverse and inclusive faculty committed to working in a multicultural environment and encourages applications from minorities able to bring fresh perspectives and scholarship to the campus and community.

Clemson University is a public land-grant institution with over 20,000 undergraduates and 5,000 graduate students, located near the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains. The Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Criminal Justice is a member of the College of Behavioral, Social and Health Sciences and is home to 21 faculty members across the three represented disciplines. Successful candidates will integrate and complement existing strengths in our program and contribute to the interdisciplinary focus of the department. For more information about Clemson University, please see <http://www.clemson.edu> or the departmental website <https://www.clemson.edu/cbshs/departments/sociology/>.

QUALIFICATIONS

Applicants should have a PhD in Criminal Justice or a closely related field by the time of the appointment. Areas of expertise are open, but the department is especially interested in candidates that would support the college and university's strategic goal of creating a more diverse faculty.

APPLICATION INSTRUCTIONS

Applicants should submit the following items via Interfolio: (1) a letter of application detailing research and teaching experience, along with a description of past activities that promote diversity and inclusion and/or plans to make future contributions, (2) a Curriculum Vitae, (3) the names and email addresses of three references. Applicants should submit materials to <http://apply.interfolio.com/93202>

Application review will begin on September 27, 2021 and will continue until the position is filled.

Clemson University is an AA/EEO employer and does not discriminate against any person or group on the basis of age, color, disability, gender, pregnancy, national origin, race, religion, sexual orientation, veteran status or genetic information. Clemson University is building a culturally diverse faculty and staff committed to working in a multicultural environment and encourages applications from minorities and women.

Apply Here: <https://www.click2apply.net/BX2zVNu8MabjIKebt7grb>